

The success alone should warrant a continuance of this worthy program. Anyone having used this voluntary program would seem not to be the people telemarketers would want to call.